Randi McGinn's presentation at this year's SPD Fall Conference highlighted the usefulness of PowerPoint in the courtroom. This month's featured website is a PowerPoint tutorial on the University of Maryland's website. It is one of many free PowerPoint tutorials available on the web. If you are comfortable with the basic functions of your computer and are willing to experiment, this type of tutorial can help you learn to use PowerPoint on your own.

Also of interest is an article on the Utah State Bar website at http://www.utahbarjournal.com/html/december_2002_0.html. In this article, author Francis Carney discusses PowerPoint's strong points, its limitations, and gives practical advice for successful presentations in the courtroom.
